by Avidicare

Since the summer of 2023, Avidicare has been a member of the Indoor Air Quality Society (IAQS) network. IAQS strives to connect, influence, and educate by bringing together dedicated and knowledgeable individuals globally who can contribute to improving indoor air quality. The organization aims to disseminate the results of their work to as broad an audience as possible.

IAQS Talks is an educational and multi-disciplinary project focused on indoor air quality. Esteemed experts from various disciplines share their insights and perspectives on the subject.

Indoor Air Quality Talk #4

The critical role of ventilation in designing and running operation theatres

In the most recent IAQS Talks session, Prof. Dr. Clemens Bulitta discussed the crucial role of ventilation in the design and operation of operating theaters. Operating theaters require meticulously controlled environments to minimize infection risks and ensure optimal surgical outcomes.

Many observe just like we do a trend towards more prefabricated construction, and we are involved with several stakeholders in projects where this method is central. We are therefore very pleased to announce our close, yet non-exclusive, collaboration with Vanguard Healthcare Solutions / Q-bital. Together, we are introducing modular facilities with Opragon to hospitals and healthcare facilities with an urgent need for additional space. Both technology and design are tailored for the optimal solution for each project.

Contact us if you would like to learn more about the collaboration and our successful projects, or if your company also has a solution where Opragon should be included.
